Mrs. Stocker P

III. PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE

IV. LEGISLATIVE LIAISON

Mr. Schymanski reported on the following:
Ohio Budget

The House and Senate are still divided on establishing a biennium budget for 2020/2021 & 2021/2022. In late breaking news, the House and Senate Conference committee did reach agreement. The Oho Excels graduation plan was approved. The Academic Distress commission language and the School Transformation Committee was put on hold for more evaluation. More data will be available in the coming days. There are several issues besides education. Supposedly, the Governor is getting impatient while waiting for a conference committee plan. I have written several times to the House Speaker; I did get a reply. Also, twice to the Governor and did get a phone call in response. I wrote twice to the President of the Senate but did not get any response. I did not expect a response, since I was in opposition to the Senate's proposed educational planning. I also did write our State Senator, Matt Huffman and our Representative Bob Cupp. Finally, working with Mr. Parker, we did send a short note to the Business council asking them to call the Governor in opposition to the Senate's High School Graduation plan.

I am following HB 281 which requires schools to designate ONE Valedictorian and ONE Salutatorian at each high school. This seems like someone complained to one of our elected officials and the result is this bill. I think this is our state government reaching into duties that belong at the school board level. I will research and provide more info.

Federal Education Funding.

The House has passed a bill that increases educational funding for title programs and some increase for other programs we at Elida use. However, the Senate is stuck. The first step is to establish spending caps. This is where the Senate is currently at. Although they are behind their schedule, they are moving at a pace similar to the last few budget cycles.

Some issues; the Senate only has 35 working days schedule (unless they modify their August recess). More importantly, the USG is rapidly approaching its budget ceiling spending limit and could hit the spending cap sooner than expected and sooner than the budget due date. From a funding point of view, I expect the Senate funding to be consistent with its history. So, title and special education money should be at least what we received the last few years and perhaps small increases in title money.

A bigger issue is the division between the political parties that seems to be growing. Past bills that usual receive widespread bipartisan support are now passing in the House closer to party lines. The Democratic Party's struggle with the Progressive Wing is like the struggle the Republican Party had with its Tea Party wing. These internal divisions do seem to be affecting language in bills that normally received widespread support. These divisions could end up affecting bipartisan support, creating more risk for government shutdown or at least, no agreement leading to Continuing Resolutions on Federal funding.

An interesting US Supreme Court case is Espinoza vs Montana Department of Education. This case is about allowing a tax reduction process by allowing an individual to donate some or all of that person's tax bill to an educational scholarship fund. This means the person, instead of paying taxes, donates money to a scholarship fund. This reduces state income and reducing the money states have to fund their normal requirements including education. If there was a way for public schools or their parents to access this money to pay, for example, school fees, I would not be objecting. But as written, these tax reduction plans that are already in several states, do not allow public schools any access to these scholarship grants. Note: from what I can find out average grant or scholarship under this fund is $500, not much help to most disadvantaged parents.
